In my profession I am in my car an average of 4-6 hours per day. In addition to this, much of this time is spent in rural areas where there is very little reception. With the creation of satellite radio technology I have the ability to listen to entertaining programming at all times wherever I am. Satellite radio makes me a more educated consumer with the business programming as well as a more knowledgeable American with the various political talk shows. Taking the opportunity to listen to satellite radio away from the consumer is totally uncalled for. Americans have the right to pay for this service if they choose to do so, isn't that the right we've been fighting for all these years.
